

Poems from the Novel: "Sparkling Ashes over the Rainbow", 2014

Useless

Climb the tree and bring me a fruit

Old squirrel knows the truth

You and I are out of time

Our lives are not worth a dime

Hand in Hand

Give me your hand

I wish to stand

Whatever it might take

Make no mistake

Smoke out your fear

Get your compass clear

Dance with the storm

And keep your heart warm

Angry Wind

Angry wind

Don't crush my wings

I long for a sky that gently sings

And spreads wisdom!

Angry wind

Let me stretch your shaking whir

Voices are noise and fear

Please let me hold your soul close

To my heart and again choose

Before we fuse and disappear

Angry wind

Squeeze your pride —sway,

And meet your freedom!

Cannot Fly

Don't you know?

Not all birds can fly!

No matter how they sweat

Or stretch their wings

They cannot fly

Sometimes, when the vultures are away,

And the sky seems open at a glance

They sneak out, sing, dance, and sway

A snake blows in at once

Birds are sweet prey

Nice try! Nice try!

Save your Breath

Save your breath

When you travel around

Feed on your memories

Stand clear—vanish if you may!

All evidences sound

Like beautiful forgeries.

Keep awake!

Maybe the beat of your soul

Is fake!
